FIRST POST OFFICES WITHIN THE BOUNDARIES OF OKLAHOMA

By George H. Shirk*

INTRODUCTION

In 1928 Dr. Grant Foreman pioneered in an extremely interesting field of Oklahoma history when he published for the first time a list of the postoffices in what is now Oklahoma. Since that time the National Archives has been established; and now that the original source material has been collected in that agency and is available for study, considerable additional material is now at hand that was at that time inaccessible to Dr. Foreman.

The list given here is that of the post offices of Indian Territory as they appeared "on paper" in the records of the Postmaster General, and is not, strictly speaking, a list of the offices or even their exact names or spellings as they may have existed on the ground here in Oklahoma.

Likewise, this is not presented as a list of postmarks. Undoubtedly some offices were never supplied with any form of cancelling device, and hence only manuscript markings are in existence. That the cancels were often prepared with the local postmaster's ideas in mind rather than in conformity with the records of the Postmaster General is quite apparent in view of the number of misspellings and other variations that may be found in the actual postmarks. For example, postmarks with the spelling "Prior Creek" (Pryor Creek) are quite common, and postmarks may be found containing the name of an office not yet officially adopted or long since discontinued in official records.

The Postmaster General made distinction in his records between the various Indian "Nations" and a separate listing was employed

*George H. Shirk, a native of Oklahoma City and graduate of the Law Department in the University of Oklahoma, is a practicing attorney with offices in the Colcord Building, Oklahoma City. As Colonel, General Staff Corps, on the Staff of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, in the European Theater of Operations, he was awarded the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal, Chevalier Legion d'Honneur, and Croix de Guerre avec Palmes in World War II. In compiling the list of early post offices in Oklahoma, Mr. Shirk has personally given his own time and effort in the search and the checking of the original records and documents of the Postmaster General, in the National Archives, Washington, D.C., as well as in the preparation and typing of the manuscript contributed for publication in this number of The Chronicles of Oklahoma.—Ed.

by him for each. Furthermore, the very early offices were listed under Arkansas Territory or Arkansas. Then as a catch-all an additional list "Nation Unknown" was established. Further complications were added by the fact that through the years the boundaries themselves changed and new nations were created out of areas formerly within the boundaries of some other Indian Nation.²

For convenience all post offices within that area known on 16 November 1907—the date of Statehood—as Indian Territory have been grouped into one alphabetic list. The location by "Nation" of each office is indicated, utilizing the boundaries as the nations existed in area on that same final date. Thus the offices are shown from the date of their original establishment as having been all along in their final nation.

The date indicated for the official establishment of an office does not of course correspond with the date it actually commenced operation. A post office was formally established by the appointment of the postmaster, and a usual lag of six weeks or more should be expected between the date the office was formally established and the date the postmaster was actually set up and ready for operation.

In some instances the office never did go into operation, and such fact is noted when it can be established from Post Office Department records. Even though the office was never in operation the formal rescinding order may follow by many months the original order establishing the office.

With the death or inability of the postmaster to further serve often a period of time intervened before some suitable person could be designated as the new postmaster. Hence, the office was in effect "discontinued" and then "reestablished" with the appointment of the new postmaster, creating a hiatus in the continued operation of the office. Each of these intervals when the post office was officially not operating has been noted.

It must be assumed that there were many times when the operation of the office was suspended or delayed locally without the knowledge of Washington, and that for many reasons offices listed by the Post Office Department as being in operation on any certain date were not actually at the moment active.

In the 1890's the Postmaster General adopted a policy disfavoring post office names of more than one word, and postmasters were circularized several times that a change to a single word was desired. Formal orders were made making these modifications and they are shown wherever possible.

² See Appendix for list of post offices in the Indian Territory, in operation during the War between the States.—Ed.

Post Office Department,

OFFICE OF THE FIRST ASSISTANT P. M. GENERAL.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21, 1882.

Sir:

The Postmaster General has ordered the establishment of a Post Office at Elizabethtown in the County of Cherokee Nation and State of Indian Territory, and the appointment of Emis. E. Parsons as Postmaster thereof.

Very respectfully,

[Signature]

Acting First Assistant Postmaster General.

Hon. Stephen A. Smith.

Arkansas.

(From the collection of M. O. Wicker)

Typical order of Postmaster General establishing a new postoffice.
Being a list of Indian Territory post offices the list of necessity closes with Statehood, 16 November 1907. Changes subsequent to that date as are shown are included only as a matter of special interest or because the information was by chance immediately available. Closing on that date, the list reflects in operation many offices that have been long since discontinued and which would not be found on a present day list of Oklahoma post offices. In other words, as to the Indian Territory portion of Oklahoma the list includes every post office and change in status up to the day of Statehood.

Great care has been exercised to preserve the exact spelling and all other data as the same appear in the original records; in any instance where a discrepancy with any previously published list appears it is because original source material now available has provided the additional information.

The post offices located in that area known as the "West Side"—Oklahoma Territory as it existed at Statehood—have been here listed separately. They are shown as a reference and to correlate the Indian Territory list and not as a complete list of the post offices of Oklahoma Territory. Prior to the summer of 1890 the Postoffice Department considered the entire area of what is now Oklahoma as "Indian Territory"; and up to that time no distinction was made in the offices established in the area eventually organized into Oklahoma Territory. Accordingly, only those offices located in the area of Oklahoma Territory that were established sufficiently early so as to cause confusion with the Indian Territory list are with certainty included in the Oklahoma Territory check list. In other words, this Oklahoma Territory list is not designed to be complete except as to offices established earlier than 1892.

Any nomenclature as to the location of the office in some geographic subdivision of Oklahoma Territory presents more difficulty than is the case of Indian Territory.

Greer County adjudged a part of Oklahoma Territory by United States Supreme Court on 16 March 1896, and Beaver County, the so-called neutral strip, ceded to the United States by Texas in 1850, are well recognized geographical entities and cause no problem. As used here Oklahoma has been limited to the relatively small central area open to settlement in 1889, and the term "Leased District" has been assigned to the entire western area south of the Cherokee Strip, excluding Greer County, that comprised the Cheyenne-Arapahoe, Kiowa, Comanche, Apache and Wichita Reservations.

While perhaps arbitrary, this division of Oklahoma Territory appears the one best suited to the manner in which the early-day postoffices and the postal service came to Oklahoma.—G.H.S.
Card bearing last impression of Indian Territory cancel and first impression of the Oklahoma marking. Two of these are extant.

important educational projects in the Choctaw Nation, Armstrong Academy was founded in 1844 with the help of a Baptist mission society in Louisville, Ky. Upon the organization of the Southern Baptist Convention, that body assumed responsibility for the work, which progressed without interruption until the Civil War. During the Civil War the Academy buildings were used by the Confederate forces for a hospital. After the War, a number of peace conferences between the Northern and Southern factions of the various tribes were held at Armstrong Academy, and the Choctaw National Council met there for a number of years. Afterwards, the institution was operated under the auspices of the Southern Presbyterian Church.
The buildings were destroyed by fire in 1921.

Located on Boggy Creek in what is not Atoka County, Boggy Depot was one of the most important of the early settlements. The first buildings were built in 1837, and within a few years Boggy Depot included churches, shops, a number of commercial buildings, and some very pretentious residences. The Choctaw National Council met there in 1859. During the Civil War the town was garrisoned continuously by Confederate troops. The brick church was used by them as a hospital, and for four years the Confederate flag flew from the flagpole of the town main street. A mile east of the town was located Capt. Charles LeFlore's toll bridge over Boggy River, and the main street of the town was the main Ft. Smith to Red River road. In 1871 the stage road took a new route, crossing Boggy River about three miles south of Captain LeFlore's bridge; and the town gradually moved south to the point where the new route joined the old road to Ft. Washita. The town has entirely disappeared, only the pre-war residence of Allen Wright, Principal Chief Choctaw Nation (1866-70), left standing.</td>

Burney.............Creek.....29 July 1896............Thomas P. Ingle Discontinued by order dated 26 July 1907, to be effective 15 August 1907. This order was rescinded, however, on 9 August 1907, and the office continued operation until 30 November 1907, when it was discontinued by order dated 1 November 1907. Mail to Pierce.

Burney Academy........Chickasaw.....3 July 1860...........Robert S. Bell Discontinued effective 22 June 1866. In 1857 the Chickasaw National Council appropriated $5500 for the establishment of the Burney Female Academy. In 1858 an additional $25,000 was appropriated for the project, and commissioners were appointed to confer with the Presbyterian Church, the body intended as the agency to operate the institution. Located a few miles from the present town of Lebanon, the buildings were completed and the school was ready to open in 1859, but the Presbyterian Church failed to furnish the agreed superintendent. The Chickasaw Nation then announced it was ready to enter into a contract with anyone who would suitably conduct the school. That the institution ever opened its doors prior to the Civil War is very improbable.

Discontinued by order dated 20 February 1904, effective 15 March 1904, mail to Broken Arrow.

Doaksville...........Choctaw......11 November 1847......Joseph R. Bertholet
Formerly Fort Towson. Did not operate during the periods 2 July 1866 to 28 May 1867 and 15 September 1867 to 29 June 1869. First established by the two Doak brothers, Doaksville soon became a main trading center among the Choctaws. As Fort Towson, located about one mile away, was still garrisoned by the army on the date this change in name was made, apparently the postoffice itself was moved from Fort Towson to Doaksville. At Doaksville the Choctaws and the Chickasaws signed in 1837 their treaty giving the latter homes among the Choctaws, and here was located the capitol of the Choctaw Nation from 1850 to 1860. In 1860 a convention met here and framed the Doaksville Constitution of the Choctaw Nation. The name of the postoffice was changed back to Fort Towson 12 June 1903. By that time old Ft. Towson was in ruins, and thus the location of this new office was not identical to the site of the original postoffice of that name. The site of the fort is about a mile east of the present town.

Fort Arbuckle.............Chickasaw.....4 August 1853........John H. Strain Discontinued effective 7 October 1875. With the impending separation of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations and the establishment of the latter on a separate reservation, it was believed that a garrison should be established in the western area prior to the actual separation. Captain R. B. Marcy was given a free hand as to the site, and its first location, now known as Camp Arbuckle, was established in late 1850 not far from the present site of Purcell. The post was named in honor of Gen. Matthew Arbuckle, who had recently died at Ft. Smith. Due to unhealthy conditions, a new site was selected and the move made in 1851. It was from this post that Captains Marcy and McClellan set out in 1852 to explore the headwaters of the Red River. Ft. Arbuckle was abandoned to the Confederates on 3 May 1861. It was reoccupied for a short time following the Civil War; but with the construction of Ft. Sill, it was finally abandoned in the spring of 1870. On 20 August 1884 a postoffice named Arbuckle was established at the site of this old military post.

Fort Coffee................Choctaw.....20 April 1835........James A. Scott Discontinued effective 20 September 1838. With the arrival of the Choctaws, it was believed desirable that a military post be established in their immediate vicinity nearer than Ft. Smith. On 22 April 1834 work was started on this new post, and on 16 June 1834 the 7th Infantry moved up the Arkansas River from Ft. Smith and occupied the new establishment near “Swallow Rock”. It was named in honor of Gen. John Coffee of Tennessee. The post was located adjacent to Skullyville. With the settlement of the Arkansas boundary question, it was decided to reoccupy Ft. Smith and abandon Ft. Coffee; and the last troops left Fort Coffee in November 1838. In 1843 the Methodist Church acquired the site and opened a school known as Fort Coffee Academy. For boys, this school served as a companion institution for nearby New Hope Academy, which was for girls.
With the outbreak of the Civil War the school was discontinued and the buildings were garrisoned by Confederate troops. In 1863 the area came under Federal control and the buildings were destroyed.
They have never been rebuilt, and there today remains little to show of this once busy army post.

Fort Gibson................Cherokee.....14 September 1842........Marcellus Duval Formerly Cantonment Gibson. Continued unrest and depredations among the Osages prompted the government to place a military post nearer to the source of the trouble than was Ft. Smith. Colonel Matthew Arbuckle arrived at the mouth of the Verdigris in April 1824, and with his force of five companies of the 7th Infantry, decided to establish the post on Grand River about three miles from its mouth.
The fort was named in honor of Colonel George Gibson, head of the army’s commissary department. The site, being very low, was an unfortunate one. Much sickness prevailed and a new post was soon erected on higher ground. Ft. Gibson was abandoned as a military post on 23 June 1857, and was turned to the Cherokee Nation. The site was surveyed into town lots by the Cherokees, and a number of lots sold to private parties. The post was reoccupied during the Civil War; and was again abandoned as a military establishment on 30 September 1871. Again reoccupied, it was finally abandoned by the army in 1890.

Fort Spunky...Cherokee 8 January 1880. James Cruthfield Discontinued effective 5 February 1883, mail to Tulsa. Although named “Fort” Spunky, this was not a military post, but was a stop on the Vinita-Tulsa stage line, and was located east of Spunky Creek near the present town of Catoosa.

Fort Towson...Choctaw 7 September 1832. George C. Gooding Name changed to Doaksville 11 November 1847. Intended as the center of government influence among the Choctaws and Chickasaws, construction of this post was begun in May 1824. The site was near the mouth of the Kiamichi River about seven miles from Red River. It was named in honor of Gen. Nathan Towson, Paymaster General of the Army. The post was abandoned in 1829. With the Indian removals in immediate prospect, orders were given for the building of a permanent establishment in the Choctaw Country. The site was reoccupied in 1831 and permanent buildings erected. For a short time it was known as Camp Phoenix. The post was continuously garrisoned until 8 June 1854, and thereafter the buildings were used for a few years by the Indian Agent. During the Civil War the post was used by the Confederate forces, and it was there that Gen. Stand Watie surrendered in June 1865. The buildings have not been used for any purpose since that time, and today only ruins remain. Doaksville was a prominent trading center about a mile south and west of the fort, and as Ft. Towson was still occupied by troops on the date the name of the postoffice was changed to Doaksville, apparently the office itself was moved from Ft. Towson to Doaksville. On 12 June 1903 the name of the postoffice was changed back to Fort Towson. It will be noted that the location of this new office was thus not identical to the site of the original Fort Towson.

Fort Washita...Chickasaw 4 November 1844. Samuel C. Humes Did not operate during the period 19 August 1846 to 8 May 1849. Discontinued effective 24 May 1880. The site for this new post was selected by Gen. Zachary Taylor in 1842; and the post itself was established 23 April 1843. Except for a brief period in 1859, it was continuously garrisoned until the outbreak of the Civil War. On 1 May 1861 Colonel W. H. Emory, the post commander, removed the garrison to Ft. Leavenworth, Kans. and the post was occupied by Confederate forces throughout the War. It was never again occupied by United States troops.

Miller Court House...Choctaw.......5 September 1824........J. H. Fowler Discontinued effective 28 December 1838. Due to the increase of settlers in the Red River country above the Great Raft, the General Assembly of Arkansas Territory by Act of 1 April 1820 created Miller County. The boundaries were loosely defined, but the county included most was what is now southeastern Oklahoma and northeastern Texas. A county government was organized, meeting at the home of Claiborne Wright, a prominent citizen of the region. His place was designated in contemporary records as Miller Court House.
and continued to serve as the seat of government as long as the county existed north of Red River. The Choctaw Treaty of 20 January 1825, ceding the area to the Choctaws, meant an end to that portion of the county. The residents made futile attempts to be exempted from the operation of the treaty, but 17 October 1828 the Arkansas General Assembly abolished that part of the county north of the Red River and west of the Choctaw line. In protest and disgust, the settlers burned the courthouse on 5 November 1828, and by this act destroyed most of the records that could today throw light on this interesting chapter of Southwestern history. On 18 January 1882 a postoffice named Kuli Chuk Chu was established at this same proximate location.

Wapanucka...............Chickasaw........5 March 1883........Frank P. Wells
Wapanucka Academy, often known as Chickasaw Rock Academy, was organized in 1851 by Rev. John S. Allen. Its official name was the Wapanucka Female Manual Training School, and 40 girls were in attendance when the school opened for the Fall 1852 term. The school operated under the auspices of the Presbyterian Mission Board until 6 July 1860, at which time the school was closed. During the Civil War the Confederate forces used the buildings for a hospital. In 1868 the Chickasaw Nation took over the operation of the school, running it on a contract basis. The Academy was finally closed in 1910, and on 11 July 1911 the buildings were sold to private parties. On 17 December 1888 the site of the postoffice was moved about four miles east to the railroad and into the Choctaw Nation.

On paper, at least, there were in operation at the outbreak of the Civil War 29 postoffices in what is now Oklahoma. The Postmaster General made no effort to keep his records abreast of the local situation, and no orders of any kind were issued for the entire period of hostilities changing the status of any Indian Territory postoffice. At the close of the Civil War a survey was made, and a series of blanket general orders were issued formally closing out those offices, 21 in number, that did not survive the war period. Some of those so discontinued were later reestablished, but of the 29 offices in operation at the outbreak of the war, only eight appear to have maintained a continuous existence.
